AT A MEETING

Of a number of the merchants and inhabitants of Pittsburgh, at the house of John Kerr, on Friday evening the 17th of January, PHILIP MOWRY, esq. was called to the chair, and WILLIAM B. FOSTER, appointed secretary.

Resolved, That a committee of three persons be appointed to enquire into the real value of the foreign bank paper, now circulating in this city—also to propose such measures with regard to the circulating medium, as in their opinion may be for the public good; and to call a meeting to report their proceedings, whenever they may be ready so to do.

Resolved, That William Bell, William Hill and Lewis Bollman, be a committee to carry into effect, these resolutions.

Resolved, That the committee be instructed to call on the committee who was appointed by a meeting held at this house, the preceding evening, to confer with them, relative to the object of both meetings.

Resolved, That they have discretionary power to publish the proceedings of this meeting, whenever in their opinion, it may be proper.

Resolved, That the minutes of said proceedings, be signed by the chairman and secretary.

(Signed,) PHILIP MOWRY.
Chairman.

(Test,)
W. B. FOSTER, Sec'ry.

In consequence of the publication of an agreement, by a number of the citizens of Pittsburgh, to prevent the circulation of certain bank notes, the undersigned committee think it their duty to step forward, and publish the proceedings of a meeting, who dissented from that measure as premature and arbitrary.....They informed the committee under whose management that agreement has been contrived and published, that they had addressed a circular to the several banks by them complained of, to obtain authentic information of the degree of credit due to their notes, and requested a postponement of their publication, until the first of February, in order that the answer of these banks might be first received.....This postponement was politely refused on the ground, that they could foresee "no information would be received, which might be relied on."

The undersigned committee request the public to observe, that the banks objected to, are all within a circle of a hundred miles round this city, where our natural and constant, and therefore, our most valuable customers chiefly reside, whose means of dealing with us, ought not to be unnecessarily curtailed—that within our certain knowledge, many of the directors of these banks, are men of respectability, who would not be concerned in fraudulent institution —that although we have as yet no authentic ground to recommend the said paper; we beg the public to observe, that all the said institutions, are of a recent date, that therefore, it is not likely they should have incurred any loss by bad debt, to make their paper worth much less than par.

Therefore the meeting which appointed us, saw no urgent reason why every man should not act on the occasion according to the circumstances of the case, and directed us to procure information on the subject, which shall be communicated as soon as possible.

In consequence of the duty imposed upon us, "to propose such measures with regard to the circulating medium, as in our opinion, may be for the public good," we have further to inform the public, that many new Banking Institutions are in preparation in our neighborhood, of whose credibility we have not the smallest knowledge.....It is to be hoped they will think it due to themselves, not to attempt circulating their paper, until they have first satisfied the public on this score....Should nevertheless, such notes be offered, this committee recommend not to receive them, unless they have the endorsement of one or two well known merchants of our city, whose signature the holders may readily identify.

From the New York Gazette Jan. 15.

The editors of the New York Gazette are indebted to Mr. Ogden bearer of despatches from Commodore Chauncey, for the subsequent interesting information.

By the arrival of the brig Alexander capt. Simmons, we learn that Commodore Chauncey, in the Washington 74, capt. Creighton, together with the frigate U. States, captain Shaw, and the Peacock sloop of war, captain Rodgers, were only waiting at Gibraltar for a wind, to proceed up the Mediterranean, to join the remainder of the squadron, which were ordered to rendezvous at Port Mahon, consisting of the frigates Java, captain Perry, and Constellation, captain Crane, sloops Erie, captain Gamble, and Ontario, captain Downes, brig Spark, captain Nicholson, and schooner Hornet, lieutenant Claxton.

Mr. Shaler, our consul General for the Barbary States was on board the Washington.

It was the Commodore's intention to proceed to Algiers, to insist upon the ratification of the treaty with the Dey, and to blockade his ports in case of his adhering to his determination of not ratifying it without the brig of war he demanded, was given to him.

It was the general opinion, that the dey would persist in his demand, which would render a reinforcement of our squadron absolutely necessary, to carry the blockade rigidly into execution.

From the moment Lord Exmouth's squadron left Algiers, the Algerines commenced repairing their fortifications under the direction of able foreign engineers, which are nearly completed, and the defects which Lord Exmouth's attack pointed out, perfectly remedied. They have also erected furnaces to heat shot, so that the place is considered very strong. In fact, the Algerines already say, "Let Lord Exmouth come again, if he dare!"

The Dey has purchased several vessels of war, and is actively employed in re-establishing his navy.

We also learn that the Spanish Government were making great preparations to retrieve their affairs in South America, and that General O'Donnell had arrived at Port St. Marys, with a part of the troops (about 5000 men,) destined to compose a strong expedition to Buenos Ayres, from which the most flattering results to the royal cause, were expected.

From the impoverished state of the Treasury, and the deficiency of military supplies, some months must probably elapse before this expedition can be fitted out.

We learn by a letter from Liverpool, that the ship Minerva, Sketchley, was to sail for New York on or about the 15th of December. Her arrival may be hourly looked for.

Accounts have been received at St. Thomas, stating that the Patriot Army, under General M'Gregor, has completely defeated the Royalists in three different engagements; the last of which was at Unare. General Urdaneta and Riccuete, had arrived at Callapossa, with 3000 men. All the Spanish inhabitants had taken their property from Porto Cavello and Laguira, and sent it to Curracoa.

Commodore Bryan, having under his command one brig and two schooners, with General Bolivar and his troops on board, sailed for Cumana about the 4th of December. It was reported that General Bolivar, on his arrival on the Maine, would be appointed commander in chief of the patriotic forces.

CLEOPATRA'S BARGE.

The elegant equipment of this vessel, by Mr. Crowninshield, for a voyage of pleasure, as it is an entire novelty in this country, has excited universal curiosity and admiration. Whilst she was lying at the wharf in Salem, we have heard she attracted company from various surrounding places to view so perfect a specimen of nautical architecture and sumptuous accommodation. Eighteen hundred ladies it is asserted, visited her in the course of one day. Cleopatra's Barge measures about 200 tons, and is modelled after one of the swiftest sailing ships which was ever driven by the wind. Being introduced on board, you descend into a magnificent saloon, about 20 feet long and 19 broad, finished on all sides with polished mahogany, inlaid with other ornamental wood. The settees of the saloon are of splendid workmanship; the backs are shaped like the ancient lyre, and the seats are covered with crimson silk velvet bordered with a very wide edging of gold lace. Two splendid Mirrors, standing at either end, and a magnificent Chandelier, suspended in the centre of the saloon, give a richness of effect to it, not easily surpassed. Instead of births on the sides of this hall, there are closets for the tea equipage and suite of plate for the dinner table, which are finished in a high style of elegance. The after cabin contains sleeping accommodations for the under officers of the vessel. The owners and captains state rooms are very commodious. The conveniencies for the kitchen's and steward's apartments may be considered models in their way. There are aqueducts in all the parts which do require them.

The intention of Mr. Crowningshield, we understand, is to proceed in the first instance to the Western Islands, thence through the Streights of Gibraltar, and following the windings of the left coast of the Mediterranean, will touch at every principal city on the route, which will be round the Island of Sicily, up the Gulph of Venice to Trieste, along the coast of Albania and the Morea, through the Grecian Archipelago to the Dardanelles; if permitted by the Turkish authorities he will proceed through the Sea of Marmora to Constantinople, thence coasting along the ports of the Black Sea, to the Sea of Aasoy, he will return by the way of the Isle of Cyprus, upon the south side of the Mediterranean; stopping at Acre, Jerusalem, and Alexandria, on his way, and sailing by the coast of the Desert, to that of the Barbary States. Immerging from the Streights he will proceed through the British Channel and North Sea, up the Baltic to Petersburg, thence along the Coast of Norway to the North Cape and perhaps into the White Sea;—from this point he may go to Spitzbergen and Iceland, and thence crossing an immense ocean to the coast of South America, touching at various points, he will complete the tour of his destination, and arrive at Salem.

It is much to be desired that a gentleman of scientific attainments, historical research and literary taste, may accompany Mr. Crowningshield in his expedition. The multiplied objects of rational curiosity, which will be presented to the traveller, on such a tour, would afford materials, which if well digested and arranged, would do credit to the country and confer permanent celebrity upon a voyage, which, without such a narration will dwindle into a topic of idle curiosity and final insignificance

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.

On Saturday evening last, between eight and nine o'clock, Mr. Barber Badger, publisher of the Naval Temple, was accosted on the Frankfort road, between the borough and the bridge at Frankford Creek, by two persons who had the appearance of gentlemen, and asked him if his name was Mr. Badger—on being answered in the affirmative, they said that they had been looking for him, and expressed a desire to purchase a number of copies of the Naval Temple, and proposed to Mr. B. to return to the Buck tavern, where they would enter into a contract. Mr. Badger consented to go with them, and had proceeded but a short distance, when he heard one of them whisper to the other something about money, which alarmed him, and he then proposed to go to Frankford. This the Highwaymen opposed, and violently seized him and demanded his money. Mr. B. being armed with a pair of pocket pistols, which he drew and fired one of them, the other was wrested from him by one of the villians and discharged, the contents of which passed through Mr. Badger's clothes, and bruised his side considerably—the violence of the ball knocked him down, and they succeeded in robbing him of his pocket book, containing 150 dollars. The money was taken, the loose papers were thrown in the road, the pocket book into the creek, and Mr. B. was left on the ground until general Snyder and major Tryon came to his relief, and removed him to a neighbouring house. The injury was not so serious as at first apprehended, and Mr. Badger is again enabled to walk out.

From the Cronique de l' Europe.

Maria Louisa and her Son.—We saw this Princess in the Palace of the Thuilleries, when the Emperor, her husband, the object of fear or of respect of almost all the Kings of Europe, whom he had conquered, shared with her his pomp, the admiration of the people, of the army, and the astonishment of foreigners. Her youth, and the reservedness of her manners, recalled to us the sentene of a Greek Poet: "Modesty is the chief ornament of a woman." This Princess was rarely spoken of, and if her name was pronounced it was added that "they knew nothing of her." This is the eulogy of a woman, whether a queen or a subject.—All that was learned from the apartments where this Princess loved to shut herslf up, was that she superintended the execution of needle work for the poor, and that she secretly sent assistance to the unhappy, perhaps to those who had been made unhappy for the fatal inclination of her husband for war. Like an Asiatic Sovereign, Napoleon wished to reign over his State and over her. Esther was less timid in the court of Ahasueras. Let this love of retreat in Maria Louisa be compared with that important celebrity of those Princesses, respecting whom we are daily hearing something in our Gazettes. When we arrived at Vienna, during the sitting of the Congress, the remembrance of Maria Louisa, in the Court of Napoleon, redoubled in us that natural curiosity which leads all men to contemplate persons of elevated rank in misfortune. This Princess had been in the palace of the Emperor, her father, above a year; her son and herself were still the first objects of attention with the people of Vienna, and of foreigners who had only gone thither to see the congress. They never went abroad without their carriage being surrounded with curious spectators. The croud remained for many hours together before the windows of the palace, waiting to see young Napoleon, who was shewn there every day, with his governess; when he did not appear, they went away discontented. Such was the interest manifested for unfortunate greatness which we were witnesses of.

The delicacy of features in Maria Louisa, has changed into somewhat of masculine, which suits adversity; in her sorrow, this princess appears resigned to the decrees of providence. Without pretending to foretel her destiny, we may predict that she may one day be worthy the name of Great, which was given to her great-grandmother Maria-Theresa. Her son, still more than she, was the subject of political conjecture. "Will he one day go and claim the inheritance of his father Napoleon? They have made him a colonel in his 6th year! with less ambition will he become as great a commander as his father!" The answer was, that the understanding of this young prince exceeded his years; traits and replies of this extraordinary child, were cited; an expression of his mother, which was mentioned to us at Vienna, may show what is to be expected from him. A courtier taking him in his arms one day, observed—"Here's a child with a true Austrian figure."—"But with a French heart," replied his mother.

Some great personages at Vienna, also asked if Maria Louisa loved Napoleon; it was answered that a princess reared up in virtue, loves her husband. The astonishment alone, which Maria Louisa could not but have felt on seeing the emperor the first time, must have inspired her with this sentiment. He had been described to her from her infancy; he had twice entered Vienna, still terrified with the explosion of the mines which destroyed its ramparts. It was this conqueror six months afterwards, that was offered to her for a husband, to save her father's States, and all the Prinees of his house. It may be judged whether or not she was in despair at such a proposal to her, perhaps, the sacrifice of Iphigenia appeared less mournful. Nothing could equal her surprise, when she arrived in France; instead of the terrible countenance of a soldier of the revolution, she saw nothing in Napoleon but the gentlest features; what a change must this have wrought in the mind of Maria Louisa, added to the homage rendered to the throne of Napoleon. This is enough to shew whether she had reason to regret the father of the child, the glory it was easier to envy than contest with him, and those regards of the world, of which Bonaparte was then the greatest.

From the Belfast News-Letter, November 8.

Mr. SADLER'S BALLOON.—Yesterday afternoon, Mr. Sadler, junr. and Mr. Livingston, a young gentleman, connected with a mercantile house in this city, ascended with his balloon from Richmond barracks, in the presence of an immense multitude of spectators. The balloon rose majestically, taking a S. W. direction. The ærial travellers continued to wave their hats and flags as long as they continued visible, which was not more than five minutes, when they entered a dark cloud, which closed upon them and they were seen no more.

An account has just reached town, (4 o'clock P. M.) that the intrepid Æerialists descended in Ticknevin bog, near Edenderry, between the hours of 4 and 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon: a distance of nearly 30 miles.

Liquids, when struck with a rapid and sudden blow, will assume all the character of the hardest substances. This fact beautifully exemplified in the successi rebounds made by cannon shot from the su face of the sea. In confirmation of the r mark we may quote a very singular a curious circumstance mentioned by t vellers, relative to the method of catchi fish, which is successfully practised some of the northern countries. The ha dy peasant when the smaller lakes and r ers of Lapland and Siberia are complet frozen over, as soon as he observes thro the clear ice, a fish perhaps a considera depth; but lying close to the bottom, strik a smart blow against the firm surface, a the impulse sent through the verticle c lumn of water instantly stuns or kills prey, which he draws up by a large h let down through the ice.

The bill vesting in trustees the estates of confirmed drunkards has been recommitted to a select committee.

FOR THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE.

To the honourable, the Judges of the court of ——, in the state of Pennsylvania: the petition of DANIEL DOLLAR,

RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH:

That your petitioner is a native citizen of the United States, and of the state of Pennsylvania. Your petitioner first saw light in the city of Philadelphia, where, being a gay young fellow of a brilliant appearance, and not deficient in solidity of character, he soon became respected, courted and admired. The rich man cherished, the poor man honoured, & all men loved him; nay, even so great was his popularity, that he could enter those doors which were closed alike upon the wealthy, the learned, and the indigent. Many a hearty squeeze has he received from the hand, that neither love, friendship, nor benevolence, could open; and he has shared the chamber of the husband and the bachelor, the priest, the matron and the virgin. The ladies were not less his friends, than the gentlemen—it is true, they sometimes affected to turn him into ridicule, but this your honours well know, is the best proof of a lady's regard, and your petitioner can assure you, that he has dangled at their sides for hours together, that they ever evinced a strong desire to detain him in their silken chains—that they always received him with smiles, and parted with him, with regret. He has not, however, been confined to the circles of fashion and elegance alone; he has visited every rank, and shone in every degree. Naturally fond of his countrymen, and possessed of an inflexible character, he neither smiled upon opulence, or frowned upon poverty—his face was alike to all—he has even been a pure republican. Your petitioner has always been a peaceable citizen; he has never "made one honest man his foe," or "from the soft-eyed virgin drew a tear." He has never, it is true, harangued at elections—but he has exerted his silent influence, and has done more than those who made most noise; he has never preached, but he has paid those who did; he has never fought for his country, nor has he sat in her councils—but he has made many patriots, and "has done the state some service."

Your petitioner will not intrude upon your honours a detail of all his good deeds, but he will confidently assert, that he has always "gone about doing good," and that he has ever been "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen." Indeed, so much is he beloved, that he would no doubt become governor of the state, were he not deficient in one quality, which in our government, is the ne plus ultra of excellence—the power of speech; your petitioner was unfortunately born deaf and dumb. He hopes however, with the assistance of the philanthropic Frenchman, who has come among us for that express purpose, to recover this inestimable blessing.

Your petitioner proceeds now to state the reason of his present appeal. It was about two years ago, that his misfortune began. It is unneccessary to recount how he was hurried from the election ground, to a gin-shop—from thence to a card-table, how he was carried thence by a young gentleman, who left him with a milliner, who gave him to a young lady, who left him at the play-house; it is sufficient to say, that after many adventures, he was taken by a huge Kentucky merchant, (who carried pistols,) and brought to the city of Pittsburgh, where he was lodged in the vault, from whence he now writes. Here, together with many companions, he has suffered under a rigorous confinement. They have borne it long without murmuring, but they can bear it no longer. The vaults of a bank, may it please your honours, afford neither air, warmth nor refreshment, and in such a place your petitioner is in danger of being immured forever. Nor is this all; so determined are our enemies upon our destruction, that they are erecting new jails in every village, for our reception. We are told, that one of these prisons is shortly to be erected at a certain place, called Noodlegoosy, to which we apprehend that we shall be transferred, and confined for life.

Your petitioner, therefore prays, that your honors will issue a writ of habeas corpus, to bring him before you, and to oblige his keepers to shew cause why he is detained; your petitioner is induced to hope and believe, that when you have reviewed his former character and present sufferings, his request will be granted; and the best prayer he can make for your honours, is, that you were "not only almost, but altogether, such as he is, except these bonds."

And for this, your petitioner as in duty bound, will ever pray.

DANIEL DOLLAR.

Much excitement has been produced in the town of Providence, Rhode Island by some person or persons, as yet unknown, having forcibly entered the burying ground in that town, and sacrilegiously interrupted the house of the dead, by digging up and carrying off the body of the wife of Mr. Isaiah P. Fuller, who had been but a few days previously interred. A town meeting has been held, and a reward of one thousand dollars is offered for such information as shall lead to the detection of the person or persons concerned in the perpetration of the inhuman act.

By the report of Mr. Patterson, Director of the Mint, to the President of the United States, it appears, that within the last year there have been struck at the mint, "in silver coins, 67,153 pieces, amounting to 28,375, dollars and 75 cents; and in copper coins, 2,820,982 pieces, amounting to 28,209 dollars and 62 cents."

The director states, that "the amount of the latter would have been considerably greater, had it not been for a disappointment in the supply of copper. The stagnation which has for some time existed in the circulation of specie currency, has almost totally prevented the deposits of gold and silver bullion for coinage."

PROTECTION OF MECHANICS.

The legislature of South-Carolina have passed a law, providing, that every master mechanic, handicraft-man and artificer, who shall erect, improve or repair any building, whatsoever, shall have a legal lien upon the building, for the amount of his just claims on the same. [An equitable law, and worthy to be copied in every State.]

THE COMPENSATION LAW.

In the House of Representatives, on the 15th inst. the new compensation bill was brought forward in a committee of the whole house. It purports to make new compensation on the per diem plan, and to repeal the old laws. Mr. Johnson declared that in bringing the bill and stating the sums to fill the blanks he acted as an agent to the committee, at the same time reserving to himself the right of voting against the measure which he wholly disapproved. Mr. Southard proposed the old six dollars a day, and Mr. Desha and Mr. Kendrick, of Indiana, supported that motion. Mr. Grosvenor proposed TEN dollars, and in obedience to the instructions of the committee Mr. Johnson EIGHT, while Mr. Randolph was for letting the matter rest, or for totally and with retrospective operation repealing it. Mr. Clay, the Speaker, denied that the public dissatisfaction with the law was altogether to be ascribed to faction or demagogues: for it had burst out at once in all parts of the Union, and was ascribed to a misconception of the substantial nature of the case. He recognized too the right of constituents to instruct their representatives and the duty of the latter to obey them; but still subject to certain limitations. If the instructions went to violate the constitution they were not obligatory; but in cases of mere expediency, he thought they were so, when clearly and fairly expressed. For his own constituents he could answer, that in changing the mode of compensation, from yearly to daily allowance, and at the same time increasing the amount of it to nine, ten or eleven dollars a day he should comply with their will. When he first met them, there was not one solitary individual among them that was not opposed to the law; but when the matter came to be discussed and time was afforded them for reflection, there was not one, on the other hand, who did not admit that an augmentstion proportioned in substance to the amount allowed by the law of the last session, was just and expedient.

Mr. Randolph made a speech of great variety of matter and of no less eloquence. He took that enlarged and liberal view of the subject which might be expected from an independent, bold statesman, who more regarded truth than popularity, and chose rather to serve the people against their palates, than to please their humours at the expense of their substantial interests. He gave the people of the United States credit for fortitude and good temper in bearing great privations and losses of magnitude. Who would believe, said he, that the people of the United States, who with the most exemplary patience, endured the embargo law, the non-intercourse law, the horrors and privations of the war, and the enormous burthen of taxes consequent to it, who bore to see the election of President taken out of their hands, and along with all these, the most sore abuses of every kind, could be kindled into rage by a puff of factious clamor, and that after having slept so profoundly, the indignation of the Leviathan should be suddenly raised into action by the sorry consideration of the 1500 dollars a year law.

Two persons, of a religious order, arrived at Rome from Canton, have brought some particulars relative to the revolution which has produced the dethronement of the Emperor of China, Kia King, on the 3d September, 1816. This Prince was dethroned by the Guards of his Palace, in consequence of a conspiracy conducted, as they say, by a female; and which appears to have arisen from the sentence pronounced by the Emperor, in relation to some affairs of religion. In consequence of this, many English merchants had left Canton

JAMES A. LEE,

PROPRIETOR of that large and commodious establishment in Howard street, Baltimore, respectfully informs the citizens of the U. States, at large, and those of the western country particularly; that his house is fitted up in a manner which will ensure to all those disposed to favor him with their patronage, the best accommodation in every respect. The reason why he addresses himself to those of the western country particularly, is that he has long lived in that portion of the union, and he flatters himself that he is remembered by many persons in that quarter.

Country merchants and persons travelling on business, who stop at his house, may always rely on the most accurate information relative to the state of the market and all mercantile proceedings.

The conveniencies of his establishment are numerous, he has near one hundred rooms neatly fitted up as chambers, where persons may be quite retired from noise and bustle—he has also some rooms elegantly furnished with large double beds, where gentlemen can be accommodated. As he considers a good clean bed one of the greatest luxuries, he has taken great pains to place in that department, maids who pay the strictest attention to the cleanliness of the sheets, and to have them well dried and aired.

His table is provided with a profusion of the best poultry, meats and vegetables, that the market affords, and active and attentive waiters who anticipate even the very wishes of his guests

He regularly imports the

Choicest Liquors.

His Madeira wine not only amateurs but connoiseurs, have pronounced the best they have ever tasted in this country, and he assures the public that it is not unfrequently the case, that he has to supply from his vaults, "London particular," to gentlemen who are determined to treat their friends with the best.

The stable attached to the establishment, he has no hesitation in pronouncing the best in the U. States—the hostlers are attentive and faithful, and have been brought up to the business—the best oats and hay selected, and none other than such as the proprietor inspects, is ever admitted into his granary

Of his establishment in general, he conceives he has spoken no more than will be fully justified on visiting his house

Mere words are often vain and weak,
Come try—it for itself shall speak

Pledging himself to be alive to all the interests and conveniencies of his guests, he solicits the patronage of his fellow-citizens.

FIFTY DOLLARS REWARD.

RANAWAY from the subscriber, living on the Great Kenhawa, on the 26th of December last, a negro man named about 27 years of age, 6 feet high, rather a light complexion, turns out his toes very much when walking—had on a blue cloth coat and drab pantaloons. It is probable he is after some negroes liberated by L. A. Wasington, as he claims one of them as his wife—it is said those negroes intend to go to Pittsburgh. The above reward and reasonable expences will be paid to any person who will secure him in jail, so that his master may get him again, on applying to David Logan, merchant, Pittsburgh, Penn or to the subscriber. HOWELL LEWIS.
